Pre-conference workshop:

Plain Language Writing for Tribunals

(Limited to 24 persons)

May 30 - 31, 2006

This two-day research-based workshop helps participants learn how to write decisions in a plain language style. Instructors will prepare written feedback on several pages of individual writing, identify both personal strengths and weaknesses in writing, and have an individual conference with the participant about the written feedback. Participants learn the CLARITY model and practice rewriting examples. On the evening of day 1, participants will write a decision, or part of one, applying the plain language principles. Each person will receive an Improving Legal Writing Manual, a compendium of over-worked words with substitutes, and a CLARITY Deskminster. The workshop is intensive, but rewarding.

Post-conference workshop:

Giving Evidence

(Limited to 24 persons)

June 2, 2006

Giving Evidence is a one-day course designed to familiarize witnesses with the basic tools to enable them to be productive witnesses in the hearing context. Through lecture and large and small group exercises, participants will practice preparing for and giving evidence in an administrative tribunal context. Whether you are a person who testifies multiple times and in different capacities or a one time witnesses, this course will make you more confident and comfortable with giving evidence.
